

tm

Findings

Information, Research, Commentary

The Truth About Iraq ©
February 17, 2004

(What the "Embedded" Photographers Can't Show you.)

(R)

Integritas – Indagatio – Intellexi

The United States has “embedded” most of the journalists covering the war on Iraq to ‘sanitize’ the images viewed by the American public-at-large. Everyday in newspapers, and on television, ‘cleansed’ images are released showing bloodless Hollywood styled images, or cheers of ‘happy’ Iraqis busy rebuilding their country as if no great loss took place. This sanitation of the American mind significantly distances each voter from the reality of these great atrocities committed at the hands of the current regime controlling the United States, of which the rest of the world is aware. This mass censorship demonstrates one of the most brazen acts perpetrated against the public interest by authority figures ever since the First Amendment of the US Constitution was written.

Below are some images not readily available in the mainstream media. We extend our thanks to the brave photographers and journalists who risk their lives and liberties to enlighten the public about the truth.

Please take heed, these photographs are explicit and may not be appropriate for certain individuals. Where we understand that these images hold high impact, we hold true to the principle that only a well-informed citizenry may best be able to remain free of, and properly direct, the actions of any government no matter how powerful that government may be.

Radcliffe B. Lewis

Special Note: This newsletter and its contents was first published on February 17, 2004. There has been stiff resistance since then to counter efforts further publication of this, and future articles. We are currently seeking every opportunity to continue with this publication. If you would like to donate to this effort monetarily or otherwise please email us at: radcliffego@hotmail.com. We thank you in advance for your contribution. Publisher

Words for Thought

“No country has the right to unilaterally impose any system on any other country without the consent of the people of that country or the international community, . . . We are faced with the threat of terrorism, but we have to be careful that we don't respond to terrorism by abandoning the precepts and principles necessary for peace and a lasting prosperity.”

The Rt. Hon. P.J. Patterson, Prime Minister, Jamaica

Reference: Jamaica Information Service Website, 10/03
Office of the Prime Minister
jis.gov.jm/officepm/html/

Disclaimer

Radcliffe Research & Investigations is a subsidiary of Radcliffe Lewis Enterprises (RLE SP), which is solely responsible for this publication. All images in the cover story are owned by Robert Fisk and his assigns; see <http://www.robert-fisk.com>, of which RLE is not.

Please direct all inquiries to:

Radcliffe Research & Investigations, c/o Radcliffe Lewis, 19 I Street, NW, Washington, DC 20001, Email: radcliffego@justicee.com.